

THE COLONIST Vol. L, Issue 12097, Friday November 22nd 1907, Nelson, New Zealand.

Dr Gardiner, at Winchester, the collector of Hampshire folk songs, has just spent fifteen days at the Portsmouth Workhouse in search of curious and old-fashioned ditties. Judging from a letter he sent to the guardians acknowledging the kindness and courtesy extended to him by the Board and the officials, he has found the place quite a "gold mine." In the course of his researches he discovered no fewer than a hundred songs.
